With Speaker - Captain Chuck Nygaard, USN (Ret)

Costa Concordia cruise ship wrecked off of Isola del Giglio, Italy on the evening of January 14, 2012. This shipwreck received worldwide attention associated with the grounding, the rescue and the challenge conducting a salvage operation while minimizing the damage to the pristine ocean environment at this resort town. The request for bids for the salvage operation went out immediately with a heavy stipulation dictated by the Italian Government that the ship be removed whole. The easiest, fastest and cheapest way to remove this wreck would be to cut it up on site and remove the pieces. "Bids will not be accepted if it involves the cutting up of this hulk." Crowley Maritime Corporation, headquartered in Jacksonville, Florida, with its Titan Salvage team, won the contract and performed the salvage. The accident is now considered the largest passenger shipwreck by tonnage in history and this is likely the most significant engineering feat of our times.

Chuck Nygaard tells the story. After retiring from the Navy he joined the maritime industry working business development for the Crowley Government Services capture team. In the Navy he commanded USS PAUL F FOSTER, USS VICKSBURG and TACTRAGRULANT, and ended his career as RADM Sinc Harris's Chief of Staff at FOURTH Fleet.
